GOVERNOR WEST.

Hon. Caleb W. West, the new Governor of Utah, will enter the Territory and upon his duties to-day. He comes to us highly recommended, his ability, integrity and general character being vouched for by some of the most prominent and best men of the nation. It is hardly necessary to say that the people of Utah extend to him a warm and hearty welcome. They have suffered and endured six years of Murray, hence the joyousness with which they hail the change. Governor West has come direct from the national capital, and is fresh from consultation with the President and members of the Cabinet in regard to his new duties. The course which he pursues may be expected to be in harmony with the policy of the national administration. Latterly we have been told on several occasions what that policy is; that it is the strict enforcement of the law, and nothing more. But the enforcement must be fair, and in a spirit of justice to all. The President is represented as saying that while he wanted the laws applied rigorously, and with the determination that they be obeyed, or violated at the peril of individuals, he desired that none of the elements of persecution be employed; he does not want the Mormons to have the right, as in the past, to charge that they are being unfairly treated and persecuted by the Administration. We are going to believe that Governor West brings with him the ideas and sentiments of the President in the matter of the government of Utah, and so believing, we accept his coming as marking a new era in the affairs of the Territory. No true friend of Utah will ask Governor West to be or do otherwise than right, and all good citizens ask and expect that he will do his duty honestly, faithfully fearlessly and fairly. There are two classes of citizens here, between whom the lines are very sharply drawn; but in his official duties we do not expect the Governor will take cognizance of this fact. There are Mormons and Gentiles, and both have equal rights before the law; it is this latter fact that we expect the Governor will recognize. In plain words, Mr. West has been made "governor of Utah Territory, and we expect he will be the chief executive of all the people, officially knowing no difference between persons who obey and uphold the law; and not a Governor casting all the weight of his official power and influence on the side of a faction in its warfare against the masses.

It might as well be stated that Governor West is not coming to a bed of roses. If he shall avoid criticism, censure and abuse, he will achieve wonders, and do much more than any of his predecessors has done; but it is possible to escape merited opprobrium, and avoid unjust reproach, and we believe he comes fully determined to pursue the course that will do most towards disarming the good and the just of any cause for complaint. He can do this by performing his plainly defined duties faithfully, fairly and in a spirit of justice, without bias and free from official partisanship. We extend to the Governor a sincere welcome, and hope that only good words will be said of the administration upon which he is about to enter.

Since the above was in type, news has been received that the City Council has taken the necessary steps for properly meeting and welcoming the new Governor. The details are given in the local columns of THE HERALD. We are glad the Council has done this, for it cannot fail to cause His Excellency to feel that while he is coming among strangers, they are friends who are bent on making him feel that this is "home."

ONE of these days it will be out of place to have compassion for "the poor Indian," and the noble red man will commiserate the condition of the sad-eyed white. According to Secretary Lamar's report there are 260,000 Indians in the United States, and they occupy 134,000,000 acres of land, including many of the best tracts in the west. Besides this vast fortune in land, they have bonds, vested and unvested, amounting to $17,000,000, together with their homes, horses, cattle and crops. From $5,000,000 to $7,000,000 is annually appropriated by Congress for the support and education of the Indians. It can hardly be said the Indians are not literally cared for by the Government.

THE PUBLIC DOMAIN.

The entries and sales, last year, of the public lands were upwards of twenty million acres. At that rate another decade will see all the public domain in the United States disposed of, as we have but two hundred million acres of public lands that are available for settlement, and of course much of that is of an inferior kind. Machinery is now doing the work that formerly furnished untold thousands of hands employment, and is constantly improving, and its power is being employed in new directions which will tend to decrease the demand for labor, especially of unskilled labor. These circumstances will eventually lead to a migration from the over-crowded districts of the East; men will have to change their occupations, and not a few of them will want lands upon which to settle and make homes. Poorly indeed, will our Government discharge its obligations to the people if it shall carelessly allow the public domain to slip from its grasp instead of holding it for the people. Certainly what remains should be carefully retained for the benefit of actual settlers; and wherever railroad corporations and other companies have forfeited their grants, the same should be seized by the Government and held for the people. The United States should take advantage of the experience of other governments in agrarian matters and not commit the same blunders that Rome, England and other nations have. The ever unequalled prosperity of the United States in the past has been owing largely to the possession of her large body of lands, and her prosperity for the future depends on prompt action by the Government in preserving what remains from land sharks and thieves.

THE STONE-CUTTERS of Newark, N. J. have been furnished by their employers with a pint of beer a day to each man, and now they have struck for a quart per day. The Bridgeport Standard suggests that they inscribe upon their banners the following:

"Strike—for your altars and your fires;
Strike—for the green graves of your sires;
God,—and a quar of beer!"

THERE is a fine bronze statue of George Washington on the sub-Treasury steps in Wall Street, and it is rumored that it has turned black in the face. The cause of it is, beyond all questioning, mortification. Judging from the story of his little hatchet, Washington had a very high regard for truth, and there has been such an amount of lying done in Wall Street, that it has turned even the face of the truthful man's statue black in the face from mortification.

BLAINE.

The Chicago Sun says that James G. Blaine has written to a friend in Pennsylvania saying that his political ambition being fully gratified, he has withdrawn from public life for good. If Blaine ever wrote anything of the kind, he is guilty of producing a strange mixture of truth and falsehood. That he is out of public life—politically at least—for good, we accept as true; that his political ambition has been gratified, we question. The goal of Blaine's political ambition was a seat in the White House as President of the United States; he failed to reach it and therefore his political ambition has not been fully gratified. The political ambition of American politicians is rather a difficult thing to gratify. Our college students are pleased with the wonderful story of Cincinnati who was twice called from the plough to serve his country, once as consul and again as dictator; and how after gaining a great victory over the Aquilans, which freed his country from the danger, he resigned his dictatorship and returned to his humble agricultural labors. But as he gets acquainted with current American politics, he soon finds out that we have no Cincinnati in our day. The American politician seldom dies and never resigns—unless his name is Eli H. Murray—or withdraws on account of his having his political ambition gratified. We guess, although the man from Maine has withdrawn from public life for good, that if the Republican party should ask him to be their standard bearer again in 1888 and call upon him to come from his retirement and save the country—why, of course, Blaine would be in the hands of his friends.

EVEN TRAMPS give evidence of the divinity within them occasionally, by doing something that is noble. A tramp walking on the track of the Cincinnati Southern Railway the other night, found a large steer fast in a cattle guard on the track, and about the same time heard the roar of an approaching express train. He lighted a torch, ran towards the train, and stopped it in time to save its probable wreck. The passengers expressed their gratitude by making him up a purse.

PENSIONS.

It is hoped that some Congressman will have courage to protest before the pension business has been run completely into the ground. A new proposition has been made, this time not to pension ex-soldiers because they were wounded or disabled in the war, but for having met with accidents since the war disabling them. If this thing goes on some fellow will come to the front with a proposition to pension children born since the war, on the ground that if they had been born before they would have fought on the right side; the plea will be based upon the correct theory that the child ought not to be held responsible for the time of its birth. About the only pension claim that any one has had the courage to oppose was that presented some time ago by an ex-Union soldier, who based his application upon the fact that he had been injured by a Confederate ram. The investigation showed that his statement was literally true. He had been butted on the knee by a rebel ram, but it turned out to be of the four-legged variety instead of a war vessel, and the claim was therefore not allowed.

THE BISHOP of Oxford sent to the warden of his diocese a circular of inquiries, among which was: "Does your officiating clergyman preach the Gospel, and is his conversation and carriage consistent therewith?" The church warden of Wallingford replied: "He preaches the Gospel, but does not keep a carriage."

"REFORMED" ARRAY.

The following announcement was widely distributed in Chicago the other day:

A meeting of reformed drunkards, led by a reformed drunkard, will be held at the Adelphi Theatre Sunday night. There will be singing by a choir of reformed drunkards, assisted by an orchestra of reformed drunkards. Among those who will speak will be: Chicken thieves, pirates, counterfeiters, pick-pockets, sandbaggers, cowboys, minstrels, shoplifters, actors, rum-sellers, circusmen, forgers, gamblers, infidels, liars, tramps.

In the course of a few years some ex-alderman from New York who has served his term at Sing Sing will stroll over to Chicago and then they can add to their list of criminals that are to speak in the cause of the Great Master a reformed ex-alderman. But to be serious, is not the parade of these so-called reformed criminals a little unsavory? It is a good thing to reform the vicious, but bad to parade them and their past crimes before the people. If they have put off the old man with his sins, good. If he has been buried, let him not be resurrected, but sleep forever in a nameless grave, and let the new man move on to a respectable place in society, unhampered with even a recollection of his past sins, much less parading him and them before the public. With head erect let him walk among his fellowmen without looking at the rock from whence he was hewn, or the pit from whence he was dug.

IT WILL be seen by reference to a Washington dispatch in another place this morning, that the Cabinet on Tuesday, considered the matter of calling a special session of the Utah Legislature. It is thought that the veto bill having gone out of business, some good would result from a session of the Assembly.

THE MYSTERY EXPLAINED.

Some time ago the New York Sun said that a check for $5,000, signed by Editor Pulitzer, of the World, was found in the Blaine fund, and naturally thought it very funny that it should have been so in view of Pulitzer's very pronounced Democracy. Since then every issue of the World has contained at least one emphatic denial that Pulitzer contributed a dollar to the Blaine fund, and Editor Dana has been called "a liar" in the World in all sorts of styles and variations. The Sun kept on repeating its allegation, and now comes the explanation, which puts all the parties to rights and should make peace between the two great editors. It seems that one day Mr. Pulitzer gave his check for $5,000 to R. Hoe & Co. in part payment for a new press; half an hour later the Republican committee called on Mr. Hoe for a contribution, and he passed over the check. Pulitzer is exonerated, the Sun has been vindicated, and the harsh words that have been printed should all be recalled.
